

File 20120212.1914: Francis Bacon (1561–1626), who came later, was the father of modern science. Roger Bacon (1214–1294) did important work in optics, gunpowder, and philosophy. Roger was a monk; Francis was a baron.

References