

File 20090614.2258: Notes for reading group on Wednesday:

- There is a shortage of well-written papers about the Common Criteria. This is not one of them.
- Most of what I read are multi-hundred page government standards. I didn't think anyone would much appreciate if I made you read one of those for reading group.
- I found some interesting presentations from the 9th International Common Criteria Conference (ICCC). The one from Oracle [1] is interesting because it clearly shows the back-and-forth negotiation that occurs between vendor and CCTL during the validation process, with even an appeal to the evaluator (CESG) to resolve an impasse.

References

- [1] Steve Hill and Duncan Harris. Time flies: Examining timeliness in alc_flr.3. In Proceedings of the 9th International Common Criteria Conference (ICCC), Jeju, Korea, 23–25 September 2008. <http://www.9iccc.kr/program/pdf/B2307.pdf>.