

File 20111218.1119: I talked with Uncle John Etzkorn last night at Kate's house about the Probabilistic Redaction algorithm. I told him how we discovered accidentally that it seems to detect insider trading as well. He was very interested at that and told me I should mention it to Kate. I explained that it was an AFRL project for the Rome Lab and that people 'lying' about insider trading knowledge is similar in semantic structure, word choice, and phrasing to the type of language people use when they are trying to talk about classified without saying anything.

I met a very interesting gentleman, Mr Wickstrom, last night. He knows Oxford. I gave him my school card.

References