

File 20100922.2122: Notes for confirmation report:

The genesis of the idea can be dated to approximately ?, further development occurring between ? and ?.

Fit a linear or power series line to the WAR graphs.

Appendix: Weekly activity report statistics. Show graphs, point out upward trend of curve fitting line, and attach a recent report as an example.

It might be argued that more progress should have been seen towards an ethnomethodological study of accreditor behavior and attitudes as was alluded to [not promised!] in the Transfer Report.

I assert that the risk of burning future relationships is too high, given the negative results that have been obtained so far in practice. This is part of a long-term research programme; those professional relationships will be needed in future. See section ? for analysis of risks of burning relationships needed to implement in the next couple of years.

I am using Ivan's risk formula

Other weaknesses (for Ivan): the unrealisticness of my accreditor model (although it is general enough to handle international and intranational accreditations).

References