

File 20100920.1420: Notes from L-code meeting this afternoon:

I entered twelve minutes late because of being at a funeral. I was able to call in on Andrea's cell phone from 44th and Ward Road. When I joined, Kevin was talking about a series of Engineering Affordability presentations that will be going on in the demo centre all week. The company is trying to convince the Pentagon that they can do the existing job at lower cost. Lockheed just whacked 400 executives to save money on contracts.

The DSS inspection is next week. They are in the building doing L-245 right now. Word on the street is that DSS considers the entire Deer Creek Facility to be a superior facility, and it's just a look to verify that pre-existing opinion, rather than a plan to crucify us and shut it down. Last week, sysadmin and security feared the other outcome.
