File 20110407.1130: Notes for WAR: UCDMO Baseline updated to 3.8.0

Returning again to primary sources, it is clear that despite Glaser and Strauss's (1967) low opinion of Melville Dalton's research ethics in the book Men Who Manage (1959), it was that work—more than any other—that drove the publication of Grounded Theory. Dalton's method is more closely aligned with the source data of the R', R" and R-zero case studies than either Glaser's or Strauss's.

I revised my write-up on SSD forensics list of application areas in which R and R" have been used, in cooperation with the developer's CMR.

Listened to another recorded lecture.

DoD 3305.13 and 8570.01-M Security Professional Educational Development (SPeD) which establishes accreditation guidance and procedures in support of the goals of 8570.01-M. It applies to both DoD and civilian IC workforce.
